

Is it free for me?

If you're out and about with someone who relies on your help because of their disability or illness, it's worth considering the many venues and travel companies which offer free or concessionary rates for carers.

All sorts of places offer concessions but they don't always advertise them. It's best to phone before your visit to check on individual admissions policies and to explain the disability or illness of the person you are accompanying. You may be asked for proof of their condition.

Many places provide free wheelchair or motorised scooter loan for disabled visitors - it's usually necessary to book in advance.
